

- He writes a new letter relating his activities during a day in prison. In one paragraph he writes: "It's eleven o'clock in the evening. Since six o'clock in the afternoon I've been reading a book by Lenin, 'The State and the Revolution", after finishing The 18 of Brumaire by Luis Bonaparte and The Civil Wars in France, both by Marx, closely related and of immense value ... and:" He later says " My journeys through the fields of Philosophy have served me well After racking my brains for a long time with Kant, Marx himself seems easier than Our Heavenly Father. Both Marx and Lenin had a terrible spirit always seeking debate and I am here amused, I laugh and enjoy reading them, they were implacable and fearsome with the enemy. Two true prototypes of revolutionaries"

Source URL: <http://www.comandanteenjefe.net/en/cronologia/april-4th-1954?page=0%2C0%2C0%2C0%2C0%2C0%2C0>